REPORT

OF THE

SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

DISTRICT No. 1.

Jeremiah Ellis, prudential committee. This school had but one term, for the Concord division has withdrawn. It was taught by Miss Mary E. Heath, who took unwearied pains to give her pupils a thorough drill in their various studies, and she was very successful, considering how irregular the scholars were in their attendance. Twelve scholars were absent one hundred and seventeen and a half days, during a term of fifty days, and were tardy thirty-four times. George E. Ellis was not absent one half day, and tardy only once. As good progress was made as could be expected, with such irregularity of attendance.

DISTRICT No. 2.

Alfred D. Burroughs, prudential committee. Both terms were taught by Miss Melinda J. Burroughs. The first term was very successful, but during the second term an unhappy state of feeling seemed to exist between the teacher and some of the scholars. Some of them did not take much interest in their studies, while others made good progress. During the first term, Charles A. Burroughs and Walter H. Clough were not absent, nor Minnie Casavant while she attended the school. Annie H. Burroughs and Fred H. Clough were not absent during the second term. Seven scholars were absent eighty-six and a half days, and tardy forty-nine times, during two terms of eighty-five days.

DISTRICT No. 3.

Thomas May, prudential committee. This school has just commenced, being taught by Mr. John P. Brown. The school house is in so bad a condition that it cannot be used.

DISTRICT No. 4.

Emory Austin, prudential committee. Miss Emma C. Gault taught both terms. Although young and inexperienced, yet she kept up a good interest for so small a school, and good progress was made, and good feeling existed between teacher and scholars. Four scholars were absent seven days, and tardy six times, during both terms of ninety days. Elmer H. Farrar was not absent or tardy during both terms.

DISTRICT No. 5.

Warren Morgan, prudential committee. Miss Lois F. Benson, an experienced teacher, had charge of this school during the first term, and sustained her former reputation as a teacher. Good order was maintained, and the school was a success. The scholars were very regular in their attendance. Only one was absent three days and one tardy twice. Mary, Fred and Samuel Sargent, Minnie Casavant, Hattie L. Morgan, Sadie W. Short and Arthur Colby were not absent or tardy during the term of twenty-five days.

Mr. J. Parker Brown taught the second term. The popularity of Mr. Brown as a teacher brought in a number of scholars from out of the district, and the school gave good satisfaction to the district. The attendance was very regular considering how many came from other districts. Seventeen scholars were absent only thirty-nine and a half days and tardy sixteen times during a term of thirty-five days. Flanders Green was not absent, and Samuel Sargent and Mary Sargent were not absent or tardy.

DISTRICT No. 6.

William Tilton, prudential committee. One term taught by Miss Mary L. Wilson, her first experience in teaching. She was faithful and earnest in her work and gave good satisfaction. Some of the scholars manifested a good degree of interest in their studies, but the same evil habit was displayed here as in most of the districts, that of irregular attendance. Fourteen scholars were absent one hundred and eighteen days, and tardy fifty times, during a term of sixty-five days. John H. Colby was not absent during the term.

DISTRICT No. 7.

Charles H. Hammond, prudential committee. The first term was taught by Miss Emma J. Lord. This was her first school. But she displayed good executive ability and with experience will make a good teacher. The attendance was quite regular. The closing examination was satisfactory to your committee.

The second term was taught by Mrs. Lizzie A. Shepard, an experienced, energetic teacher. She awakened a good interest in the scholars in their studies and raised the standard of the school very much to the satisfaction of the district. The attendance good. During the first term Sadie Hammond was not absent or tardy. Lucy J. Hammond was not absent the first term, and neither absent or tardy the second term, and Laura A. Hammond was not absent nor was Jennie Colby absent or tardy while she attended the school. Eight scholars were absent forty days, and tardy thirty-four times, during two terms of ninety days.

DISTRICT No. 8.

Gilman Saltmarsh, prudential committee. Miss M. Alice Saltmarsh had charge of this school both terms, being her first attempt at teaching, yet she kept up a good interest in the smallest school in town. The examinations were satisfactory. Hattie A. Saltmarsh not absent or tardy during the first term. Frank N. Saltmarsh was not absent during the second term. Four scholars were absent sixteen days, and tardy five times, during both terms of one hundred days.

DISTRICT No. 9.

Charles W. Davis, prudential committee. Miss Anna C. Rogers kept both terms. She remarks in her register "that with few exceptions, the school has been a pleasant one. It has been my object to have the scholars understand what they have studied and I trust that the school has been profitable." Your committee are free to say that she succeeded in her efforts in a good degree. The scholars were the most regular in their attendance of any scholars in town, there being only fifteen and a half days of absences, and twenty-nine instances of tardiness, on the part of thirteen scholars during two terms of seventy days. N. Ella Woodbury, Nellie M. Merrill, Alma S. Ordway and Arthur C. Davis were not absent during both terms. Lizzie B. Quimby, Frank H. Merrill, Andrew Merrill, Willie F. Davis, Anna S. Messer, Frank E. Woodbury and Albert J. Woodbury were not absent for one term.

DISTRICT No. 10.

William A. Elliott, prudential committee. Miss Nettie L. Woodbury was the teacher for both terms. She is an earnest, conscientious and faithful teacher, who succeeded in winning the love of her scholars. The scholars took a deep interest in their studies and good progress was made. Sixteen scholars were absent two hundred and fifteen days, and tardy fifty-two times, during both terms of seventy-five days. Carrie L. Colby, James A. Colby and Fred C. Elliott were not absent during one term.

DISTRICT No. 11.

Asa Morgan, prudential committee. Miss M. Katie Howe taught the first term. Miss Howe's education was sufficient and she passed a good examination, and we expected a good school, but we are sorry to report that her school was a failure. There seemed to be no interest on the part of either teacher or scholars.

The second term was taught by Mr. J. P. Brown, who succeeded in awakening an interest in the scholars in their studies and the school was successful, although he labored under a great disadvantage in not having a suitable blackboard. Sadie W. Short, Hammie M. Colby and James E. Colby were not absent or tardy during the first term. Sam. B. Morgan was not absent. During the second term Arthur E. Colby and Stickney F. Short were neither absent nor tardy. Martin A. Hadley and Charlie A. Drown were neither tardy nor absent while attending the school. Bertrand Morgan was neither absent nor tardy during both terms. Fourteen scholars were absent forty-two and a half days, and tardy thirty-four times, during two terms of seventy-four days.

DISTRICT No. 12.

James H. Palmer, prudential committee. Mrs. Lizzie M. Brown was employed to teach this school both terms, this being her second year of service in this district. She sustained her former reputation as a teacher, but she labored under great disadvantage on account of a variety of text-books in the school, which made the classes very small and less interesting, and served to confuse the minds of the scholars. This evil exists to a great extent in all our schools, but to the greatest degree in this. Thirteen scholars were absent two hundred and eighty days, and tardy thirty-one times, during both terms of seventy days. Luella R. George was not absent or tardy during the first term.

DISTRICT No. 13.

Moses J. Perkins, prudential committee. The first term was taught by Miss Anna C. Rogers. In her register she says: "The attendance has been so irregular that the improvement is not what I had hoped for; but it has been my object to have them understand what they have studied, and I think most of them do." The examination at the close of the school proved the above remark of the teacher to be true.

The second term was taught by John C. Hammond, an energetic, efficient teacher. He succeeded in awakening an interest in the studies on the part of some of the scholars who had not felt much interest before, therefore his school was successful. Many from out of the district availed themselves of the benefit of his instruction. During the first term of fifty days thirteen scholars were absent one hundred twenty and a half days, and tardy thirty times. Perley A. and Fred H. Clough were not absent while they attended the school. During the second term thirteen scholars were absent fifty-seven days, and tardy twenty times, during a term of forty-five days. Willie M. Hammond was not absent or tardy after he entered the school.

DISTRICT No. 14.

Willoughby Colby, prudential committee. Both terms were taught by Mr. J. P. Brown, the last being his third term in this district, besides a private school. Mr. Brown is too well known as a teacher to need any comment from us, for he is now on his fifth term for this year, having taught in four districts. He was as successful here as he had been in other districts. During the second term so many came from other districts that it was the largest school in town. Twenty-three scholars were absent seventy-two days, and tardy forty times, during both terms of seventy-five days. Mary J. Elliot was not absent the first term while attending the school. Louis F. Berry, Samuel Merrill and Frank E. Colby were not absent during one term. Dwight Mattoon and Willie Morgan were neither absent nor tardy during one term.

It will be seen by this report that there are some evils existing in our schools which should be corrected. A great deal of time and money has been lost by scholars being absent, and the schools greatly damaged. For we learn from this report that one hundred and seventy-one different scholars have been absent twelve hundred and twenty-nine and a half days, and been tardy four hundred and forty-one times, while attending the several schools; then three hundred and eighty-one days have been lost by twenty-seven scholars, by leaving school before the close of the term or by not entering for a number of days after the school commenced. Number of days lost in all is sixteen hundred and ten and a half days. More than three hundred and twenty-two weeks of five days each. Any one doubting this statement is referred to the registers. This is not only a great loss to those who are absent, but it retards the progress of others to have some members of a class absent so much of the time. We do not know where the fault lies, but we do know that it is the duty of every parent to take such an interest in their children's education as to have them enjoy all the opportunities for acquiring an education that may be within their reach. We earnestly hope that during another year this great evil, which is such a damage to our schools, may be remedied.

Another evil, which should be removed, is a great variety of text-books, which causes each school to be divided into such small classes that the scholars do not take the interest in their studies which they otherwise would. One school of twelve scholars we found divided into nine reading classes, reading out out of books published by four different authors, and four studying geographies by three different authors. We found in some schools several kinds of grammar, some of them teaching the children that nouns have two genders, some that they have three, others that they have four. Some geographies teaching that the world was round, others that it was nearly round; some of them said there is thirty-two States in the Union, others that there is thirty-six, and many other erroneous statements. We found one boy studying an arithmetic that taught him to reckon our currency by pounds, shillings and pence. His book belonged to a past age. All can see how such contradictory statements would confuse the minds of scholars, and retard their progress. We do not believe it best to change our school books even as often as the law allows, but all who will look at the subject will see that there should be a uniformity of books in our schools—especially where, as with us, scholars go from one district to another, and we heartily recommend that practice, for most of our schools are so short that they would not get much schooling if they did not.

By this evil the progress of our schools has been very much retarded. New books will interest scholars more than old ones, and then our school books should keep pace with other improvements, so that they may not teach the children ideas which are obsolete, or customs that have long since passed away. When there is ample provision made by law for the supply of suitable books for every child, we do not see any reason why this evil should longer exist.

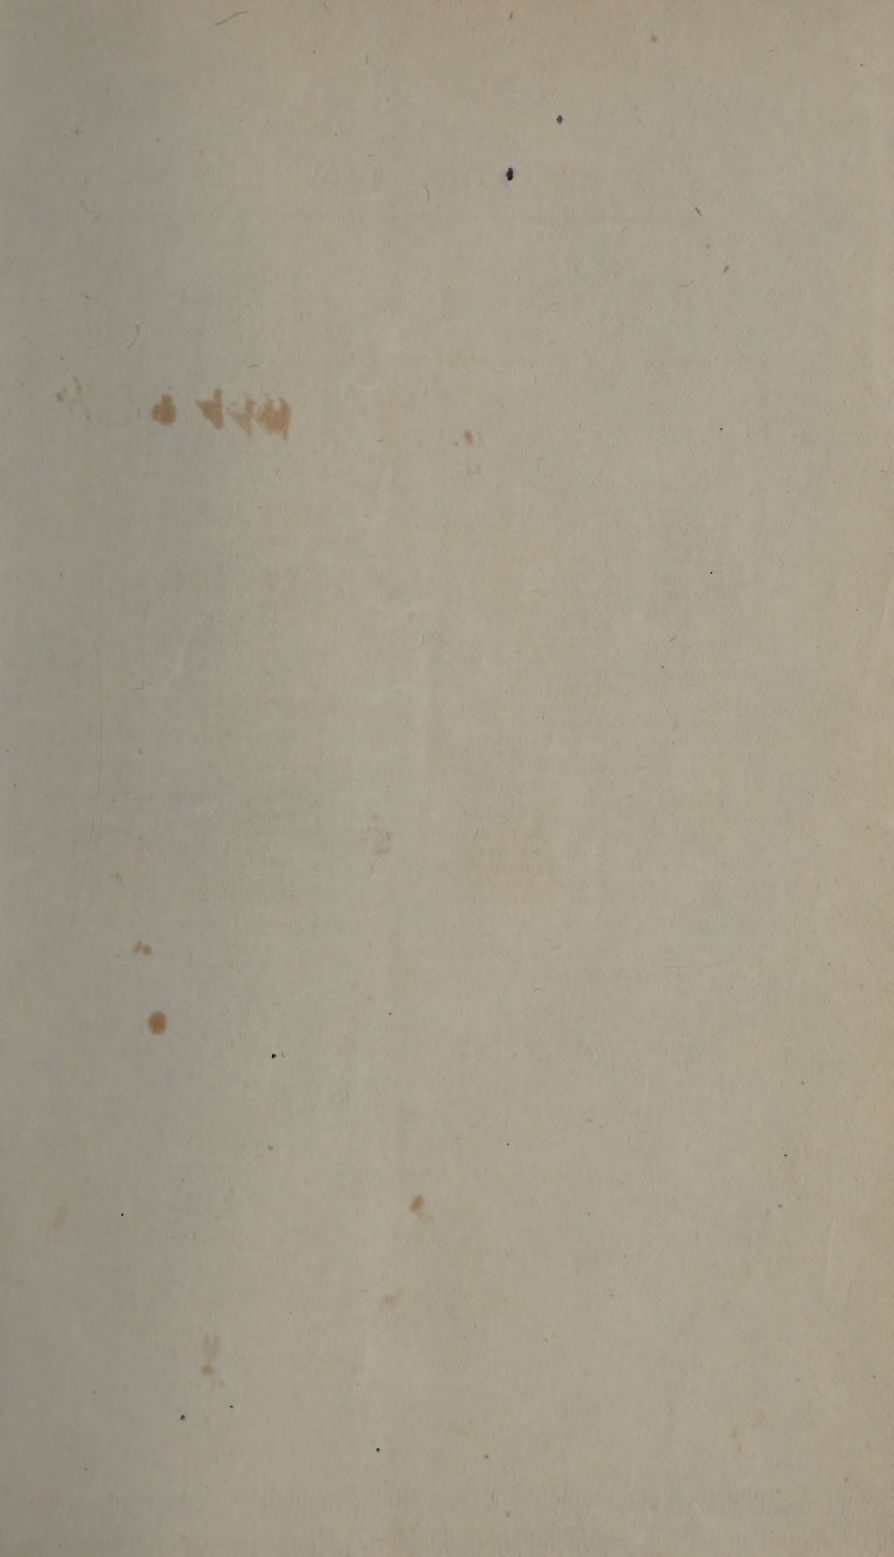

We know of no better way that a parent can lay out money for his child than in educating him. It is much better than to leave him a fortune. For if he has not an education he will not know how to take care of it; but if he has an education he can readily acquire property, for brains bring a higher price in market than muscle. Then, as your committee of last year said, "The statistics of our prisons show that ignorance is the parent of crime, and that disgrace in manhood is the result of neglected childhood." It will be but a few years before the welfare of the nation, the State, the schools, and the church, will pass into the hands of the school children of to-day. Can too much be done to prepare them for the high responsibilities which are so soon to come upon them.
